Be the Change: Successful Intelligence and the New Global Competition for Talent

This forum-workshop, facilitated by Carol Carter, a national and international expert on college and career success, promises to provide an informative, inspirational, and practical exchange with high school and college faculty and staff who share the same commitment to world-class standards.

Agenda

- 8:30-9:00 Continental Breakfast
- 9:00 -10:15

The Educational World is Flat: Global Trends Impacting US Education

In this opening keynote session, Carol Carter will explore the global trends impacting teachers and students around the world. As teachers in the U.S. become more aware of what is happening in countries like India and China, they can better equip their students with the knowledge of the borderless world they will enter upon graduating from high school and college. We will also explore some of the top twenty issues facing the world and some of the pioneering role models who are boldly tackling these formidable problems. If students do not know, they can't understand. If they don't understand, they can't help. This session will give you a context to help your students understand how they can "be the change" and inspire fellow faculty members and staff to renew their passion, purpose and dedication to their mission.

- 10:15 Break
- 10:30-12:00

Successful Intelligence

Based on the research of Dr. Robert Sternberg, this interactive session will provide an overview of what it means to be successful in the world, not just in school. Students think about college, career and life success, but faculty often focus on academic success only. This session will provide compelling reasons of why this balance is crucial to student motivation and, ultimately, graduation rates. Sternberg's theory is that we have to develop the whole student—with analytical, creative and practical skills. We will use academic coaching techniques to draw out the qualities in the "successfully intelligent" classroom, learner and teacher.

- 12-1:00 Lunch

About the Speaker

Carol Carter has written over twenty books on college and career success. Her best-selling series at the college level, KEYS TO SUCCESS, is used by 200,000 students in the U.S. and around the world, including a version in Chinese and Spanish. She is founder and president of Lifebound, an academic coaching organization and company for middle school and high school success. She strongly believes that reversing the trend of unprepared college freshmen stems back to behaviors and habits taking shape in the sixth grade.

She speaks nationally and internationally on student success topics including coaching skills, emotional intelligence, social intelligence.
